A QUESTION OF MORALS.

The councilmen most active in the discussion of the brewery-saloon question seem to be in danger of getting confused as to the real problem. They go at the subject as if it were a matter of politics solely, the final determination to depend upon whether the brewers really have fixed up a deal with the Republicans or not, whereas the whole matter is one of public morals and the proper enforcement of the laws.

Brewing, as a business, is no crime; indeed, compared with some branches of the liquor industry, it is comparatively innocuous. Considered only as a beverage, beer is a force for temperance where it displaces the more fiery fluids of intoxication. But—and this is the main point—when a brewery furnishes the backing for criminal resorts in the guise of saloons and in-stalls criminals to manage these places, then it is properly the target for attack and reformation.

Salt Lake has too many tough saloons, and most of them are backed by one brewery. The "Candy Bills" and their ilk could not exist in business without the protection of a brewery corporation, and simply as a police measure for the benefit of the whole community such places should be wiped out. Under existing laws, the reputable saloonkeeper has as much right to establish himself and do business as any other citizen in any line of endeavor. It is the disreputable saloon that needs attention, and the council should focus its discussion on that salient fact.

There seems to be no question but that the liquor interests have made an arrangement with the Republican machine whereby the machine secures a big campaign donation, and in return is expected to control legislation as the donors desire. Very naturally the campaign managers of the other parties do not regard that sort of politics with any great pleasure; but they may well afford to let the people take care of the situation. The only possible result of such a transaction will be injury to the men who effected it, and the publicity already given it will more than offset any benefit it might have given the Republicans.

PRIZES TOO MEAGRE.

Practically all of the fruit and vegetables shown in the horticultural hall, aside from the Dixie exhibit, were grown less than fifty miles from this city, most of it coming from Salt Lake, Weber, Davis and Utah counties. The great peach and apple growing county of Box Elder, contiguous to Brigham City, sent scarcely any; Morgan, Tooele, Emery, Grand, Juab and Sanpete counties, all big growers of fruit, sent none. The fruit industry of the state is conservatively estimated to amount to a million and a half annually, and is certainly deserving of a better showing than is given it at the state fair. The prizes offered are almost paltry, befitting pioneer times only. The prizes do not cover one-quarter the actual cost of the fruit put on exhibit; the winners of the big prizes do all their fair work at an actual loss, to say nothing of those who win only an occasional trophy.

An industry of such widespread interest as that of fruit growing, which has shown more phenomenal progress, growth and development in the last ten years than any other industry in the state, which can send a fruit display 1,000 miles away to compete with all the western states, and win a $2,000 trophy against great odds, is certainly worthy of something better than the paltry treatment it receives at its own state fair.

Were the prizes adequate and worthy the great industry represented, growers of fruit and vegetables in all parts of the state would contribute, and the showing would so far eclipse the present exhibit, splendid as it is, that it would bear no comparison, and the horticultural hall would be inadequate to contain the displays sent in, which would be truly representative of the whole state.

COME ALL YE!

Far be it from us to disturb the hilarity of this joyous occasion, but even a Democrat may be permitted to make a few remarks on the refusal of the Smoot machine to permit its electors to remain on the manifold "American" tickets. The remarks are permissible because the Democrats have no objection whatever to having the Bryan electors on as many tickets as are printed. The more Bryan votes the better it suits us; and if the Republicans choose to throw a goodly number our way by spurning the "Americans," so much the better. As has been remarked, every little bit helps; and in this case the vote of the "Americans" is no inconsiderable thing.

Of course, the decision of the Republicans means that they prefer to center their strength on the state and county election, no matter what happens to Taft. If they had any deep concern for the welfare of the national ticket they would welcome the votes of the dissenters and let Republican electors appear on all the tickets.

Possibly they feel so secure about the electoral vote that they think they can afford to take chances, but if that is their notion they will have a chance to revise it when the returns come in. If they bar the "American" Republicans, they will unquestionably jeopardize the Taft electors, if they do not actually insure the state's electoral vote for Bryan. The simplest calculation based on the returns for the past four years would show them as much, if they were honestly looking for illumination and guidance. The margin of safety for the Republican party is so small that the "American" vote cast with any sort of unanimity for Bryan would carry the state for him.

That being the situation, the deduction seems very clear: the Smoot machine would rather take a chance of letting the state go for Bryan than lose any votes for its county ticket in this county or risk defeat for the candidates it has chosen for the state offices.

Meanwhile the Democracy begs to assure every voter, Mormon, Gentile, "American," Socialist, Populist, Prohibitionist or what not, that it has no objection to honest votes from any source. Bryan is going to carry the country anyway, but it would be very pleasant to see Utah back in the Democratic column, where it rightfully belongs. Now is the time to get in.

I. M. BARRATT.

Captain I. M. Barratt's sudden death comes as a stunning blow to the numberless friends who had seen him only a few days ago apparently in the best of health and seemingly destined to fill out the full three score and ten allotted to man. His very presence carried with it the impression of health and strength; he was so aggressively vigorous that the thought of losing him now was impossible. Stricken with pneumonia, he succumbed after barely more than a few hours of fighting, and died, conscious to the last. The captain, as all his friends called him, was one of the familiar figures of the city and state. He had been a resident for long years, and his activities brought him into contact with the public familiarly. As a merchant in early days, as manager of the old Garfield resort, as a sportsman, he had a very wide acquaintance, and none knew him but to respect and admire his fine qualities. He was a man of very strong convictions, and never hesitated to express them. As a mere lad he had fought in the confederate army, and he ever had the courage of the fighter in any cause for which he enlisted. The tender side of his nature was known to only a few of his intimates; he loved his fellow man, he loved dumb animals, and his whole life was wrapped up in the career of the boy who had just come into his own triumph as a successful artist. Probably if he had had his choice he would have wished to go as he did, without lingering and with a full knowledge that the end of all had come. The world was better for his living, and he left behind him a record that ought to be a source of consolation to those who lose by his going.

FALSE CRY RAISED.

One of the most disreputable acts of the Republicans in the present campaign is the attempt on the part of certain manufacturers to coerce the workmen in their employ, one Philadelphia concern, ball-bearing manufacturers, going so far as to impose a 10 per cent increase in wages and the employment of 400 extra hands in case Taft is elected. This particular corporation has more orders on hand than it can possibly fill and is literally taking the bread from the mouths of children in a wicked and dastardly attempt to control the votes of their fathers. The steel trust, divinely instituted and endorsed by the president of the United States, is holding back the execution of orders for the same purpose. Governor Hughes, who poses as the quintessence of all that is pure and holy, is chasing about the country in the mad endeavor to make the people believe the present business depression will continue if Mr. Bryan is elected.

It remained for the Republican candidate for vice president, however, to reach the lowest depths of villainy when he declared Bryan to be "a prophet of evil and dissension, a man who seeks to cripple industry, destroy prosperity and impoverish schools and churches." This is from the representative of the trusts and protected industries in the lower house of congress, and who will be their tool and henchman in the vice presidential chair if by any unfortunate combination of circumstances he should be elected.

former president of the Association of Manufacturers, told the exact truth when he said the election of either Bryan or Taft would not affect the business of the country. This year labor is standing pat, and it is inconceivable that the merchants and honest manufacturers of the nation can be deluded by this false cry. The desperation of the Republicans is apparent when such despicable methods are employed.

The two extremes of this era of Roosevelt prosperity were observable in Chicago last week. One was the discovery that at least 15,000 school children were suffering from lack of food. The other was the arrival of W. E. Corey, president of the steel trust, in a special train of Pullmans, accompanied by his latest wife. All the luxuries that money could procure were at the woman's command; a string band of twelve pieces being provided for her entertainment while traveling, and she was lulled to sleep by guitar and mandolin. The high protective tariff is for the benefit of the Coreys. Who is going to feed the starving children?

Mr. Taft mentions only one article on which he thinks the tariff should be altered, pottery, and in this case he would raise it. The duty on pottery is from 50 to 75 per cent, under the Dingley bill, but as Ohio is the center of the industry in this country, the explanation of why this article was specifically mentioned is simple.

The administration is now involved in a Panama canal scandal, and an inquiry is in progress. The charge of discrimination on the part of Colonel Goethals is acknowledged, to begin with, but there are uglier charges to be met. Out with the rascals.

One of the exhibits after the campaign is over will be the hole into which Longworth crawled when the bricks began to hurtle through the air in his direction.

The prohibition brother has been singing and praying for a good many years, but this time he appears to have shucked his coat for a fight. Probably an earnest of what's coming four years hence.

Let the tail go with the hide. Beat the Republican ticket in Utah 'and let's have a season of rejoicing that not a state or federal official escaped the wrath of an outraged and indignant people.

There's many a Republican congressman shaking in his boots since the ultimatum of the temperance committee of the Methodist conference was made public. It is written that a man cannot serve two masters.

Nick Longworth was retired from circulation in double quick time after exposing the Roosevelt program. What his wife's father said to him has not been reported, but it can easily be imagined.

One blast upon the bugle horn of Henry Watterson is worth 10,000 votes in Kentucky. It will also be heard all over the country.

The people are paying the expenses of the Bryan campaign. Who's staking the Republicans?
